Overview

Addysen Feeley is an Associate Boyle | Shaughnessy Law, practicing out of the Boston, Portland, and Manchester offices.

Addysen graduated from New England Law | Boston where she served as an Executive Articles Editor on the New England Law Review and worked with several student organizations including the CORI Initiative and the Women's Law Caucus. She now also serves as an adjunct professor of Legal Research and Writing at New England.

Before her legal career, Addysen was a schoolteacher in North Carolina where she taught English, History, and Math, and worked on education policy initiatives and community outreach. Addysen graduated with honors from Arizona State University with a Bachelor of Arts in Religious Studies and minors in Anthropology and Art History.
