

Traumatic Brain Injury – Defense Verdict

SERVICES

Premises Liability

Shareholders Nick Kosiavelon and Megan Fitzgerald of BSL's Boston office won a defense verdict in a traumatic brain injury ("TBI") case in Middlesex Superior Court.

RELATED ATTORNEYS

Megan E. Fitzgerald

Nicholas B. Kosiavelon

The Plaintiff alleged that she fell backward on untreated ice in the parking lot of a supermarket hitting her head and suffering a traumatic brain injury and variety of orthopedic injuries. The Plaintiff utilized "reptile lawyering" tactics, asserting that because the Plaintiff fell in a handicap parking area the client had a heightened duty to ensure the area was clear of hazards.

The Defense focused on the weather conditions, calling a local meteorologist, as well the extensive efforts of the defendant to address snow and ice conditions at the store. The Defense also presented testimony from a retained neurologist arguing that the TBI claim was meritless and that all of the Plaintiff's complaints were either non-existent or pre-existing.

After a six day trial the jury returned a no-negligence defense verdict.